

A tribute to Sally

Sally had to be euthanized today. She was only four years old. Sally was the sweetest brown tabby you could ever know. She was an owner surrender, picked up at the owner's house and transported to a SOS-participating veterinarian. Sally couldn't eat or urinate and was very dehydrated. Her temperature was down to 90 degrees. She was very anemic as there were at least 100 fleas on her frail skin-and-bones body. She could barely stand.

Sally was given fluids and catheterized so she could urinate. Upon further examination, Dr. S. determined that Sally's teeth were in such poor condition that they all needed to be extracted. Plus Sally's tongue and the back of her mouth were very ulcerated. It is no wonder that she could not eat and was starving to death.

Sally deserved a good life and not have to suffer the way that she did. Sally is at peace now.
